

My Magical Day

With
The Gingerbread Boy!

Written by Stacie Dodge

Today when I woke up all I could think about was making gingerbread cookies with my mom. My mom makes the best cookies in the whole universe and she always lets me decorate them all by myself.

So after breakfast I jumped up and down and asked my mom if it was time to make cookies. “What’s the big hurry sweetie?” my mother asked. “Grandma’s coming today and this year I want to make her the most perfect gingerbread boy,” I answered.

“Well, in that case, we had better get started.” My mom smiled. So my mom started getting out all the ingredients. Then she started looking around for the measuring cups, spoons and a great big bowl. She carefully measured out the sugar, the flour and the rest of the ingredients and each time she measured out one of the ingredients she let me pour it into the bowl, which was so much fun! As I poured the cinnamon into the bowl I thought it smelled really good and then I smelled the ginger and mmm it smelled the best of all the ingredients!

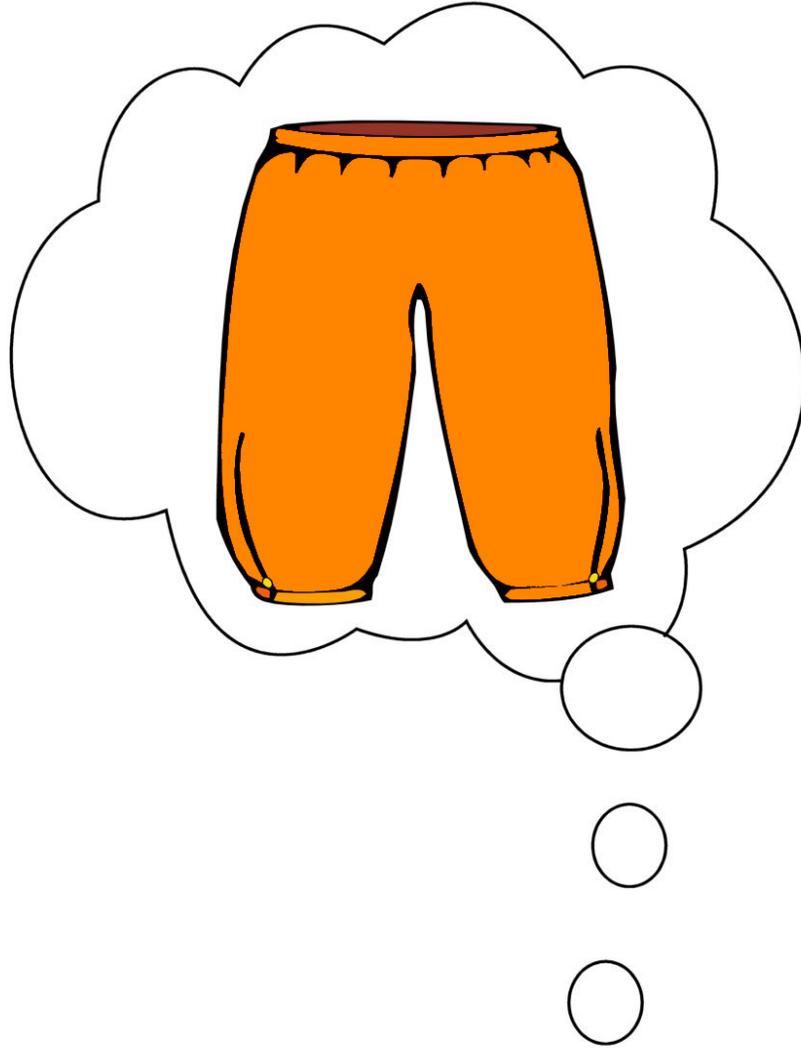

I got to stir the batter round and round until it was all mixed up. My mom had to help stir the batter as the gingerbread cookie dough gets really stiff. It's so much fun making cookies with my mom!

This page is located further into the ebook, when the gingerbread boy is ready to be decorated, and then the magic begins! Please view the next 2 pages.

The next thing I know the gingerbread boy is speaking to me. "Hello, I'm the gingerbread boy and who are you?" he asked.

“Could I have orange pants, please, please, please?” pleaded the gingerbread boy. “Sorry, but remember, I told you I only have three colors,” I reminded him. “Well,” said the gingerbread boy, “how about if I show you a cool magic trick to make this happen?” “Ok. I love magic tricks,” I said excitedly.

“What do I do first?” I asked him. “If you would be so kind as to start by placing red frosting on my legs, that would be a great start,” said the gingerbread boy. I started to smooth the frosting nice and neat on his legs to make the red pants. “Now I’m going to show you the magic trick,” grinned the gingerbread boy.
